out is "beer," "brats," or "fish fry." It isn't often that someone comes out with the spontaneous reaction "art." But identity in the process of interacting with others. It also demonstrates how powerful stories can be, fictional or not, in teaching us about ourselves and the world.

Louise Cainkar, Associate Professor, Social and Cultural Sciences

More immigrants came to the United States in the past ten years than in any prior decade in American history and they are changing the face of the United States. Most of these 14 million "new Americans" come from Latin America and Asia, many of them practice religions uncommon to American society, and nearly one third of them have no English skills. Through film, news, and literature, this class looks at some of the challenges these immigrants face as
